HAVANA REQUIEM by Paul Goldstein | Kirkus Reviews

Havana Requiem is Michael Seeley's third outing and Paul Goldstein deserves plaudits for steering the legal thriller away from familiar Grisham-territory. The depiction of the seamier Havana reality, not its soft-focus picture-postcard flipside, is enthralling. The missing-royalties plot makes a refreshing change from those standard-fare hot-shot courtroom dramas (and as a Stanford law ...

by Paul Goldstein. Winning the annual Harper Lee Prize for Legal Fiction in 2013, following prior winners John Grisham and Michael Connelly, confers honor enough to warrant recommending Paul Goldstein's Havana Requiem. Three other attributes support this recommendation.

Paul Goldstein - Faculty - Stanford Law School

Fascinating, Byzantine, and completely unpredictable, Havana Requiem puts Paul Goldstein squarely in the first rank of not only legal thriller writers but all thriller writers. The portrait of post-Fidel Cuba and the sweltering inequities of Havana is unforgettable." — Timothy Hallinan, author of The Queen of Patpong
