Military Knife Fighting

A combat knife is a type of military fighting weapon designed to inflict maximum physical damage, all the way up through lethal damage, on an enemy in a physical confrontation at close range, specifically at grappling range. Military fighting knives are designed to give their user the means to engage in either offensive or defensive situations, with the ability to save your life should you ever be found in one of these situations, either as a military service member or for personal ...

MCMAP Knife Fighting. The Marine Corps Martial Arts Program (MCMAP) is a complete fighting system, but it dedicates a substantial portion of training to knife-fighting. The entire system focuses on brutal hand-to-hand combat, the mindset of a warrior, conditioning to outlast your opponent, and close-quarter fighting. Altogether, the program is a mix of Brazilian jiu-jitsu, boxing, wrestling, Muay Thai, and other proven martial arts. It also incorporates a warrior ethos from the Spartans ...

Military knives come in various sizes and are made with different blade and handle materials. The majority of knives made today are built with survival in mind, so they're designed for use in a multitude of situations beyond close combat fighting. Even so, a combat knife means nothing if it's not durable, which raises the price of these compared to others. It's all worth it if it means ...

The M3 fighting knife or M3 trench knife was an American military combat knife first issued in March 1943. The M3 was originally designated for issue to soldiers not otherwise equipped with a bayonet. However, it was particularly designed for use by elite or 'shock' forces in need of a close-combat knife such as airborne troops and Army Rangers, and these units received priority for the M3 at ...
