"The Thirteen-Gun Salute" is the 13th of 20 books in the Aubrey/Maturin series, which is really more like a 7,000+ page novel in 20 "chapters" than a series of free-standing stories. Mr. O'Brian's writing style is elegant and his descriptions captivating, but the characters in this book are the product of an ongoing development process from the previous 12 books. To just "jump right in" at ...

Book 14 The Nutmeg of Consolation, is a continuation of Book 13. Patrick O'Brian's meticulous attention to detail is second to none and the finest novelist of the sea-faring narrative you will ever read. Once you are smitten you will look for books on their sea voyage routes, places visited, customs, costumes, food recipes and other ships of Nelson's Navy.

The story has problems until you realise that it's really just the first act of the next book in the series. Even so, there are several dissatisfying aspects, such as the author's habit of resolving very important plot points "off stage" and then telling us about them afterwards. This can be extremely anticlimactic. There is also a strange sense of a "day in the life" - the story meanders as the ...

The Thirteen-Gun Salute: Aubrey/Maturin series, book 13 by ...

:-) By book 13 you're already heavily invested in the ongoing adventures of captain Jack Aubrey and doctor Stephen Maturin. So I will just say that I treat these as leisurely serial novels, much like the radio shows of old, where the adventures keep the story rolling along and we enjoy the characters' developing lives as much as the main action ...
