I have a Yamaha P-95 that after approximately one year of being stored, currently is not emitting any sound from either speakers or headphone plugs. I checked the functionality of the Keyboard and the MIDI processing was ok. I tried all the quick solutions out there (enabling internal audio, check if something is blocking the headphone plugs, cleaned volume key), I figured it had to be the amp ...

This means that the Yamaha P95 is essentially just an upgraded version of the P85, which you probably already knew. You can see what they improved on in the Differences section. The voices were changed, and the sounds were slightly altered. The P95 also comes in with better built-in speakers, which you might care about if you don't have headphones or external speakers. The most important ...
